We have a small team of two, one being me and the other being our scrum master/project lead. I have been working on a project for a month now. The project is in a MEAN stack. My task was to build a small admin section to be used for a client. I have received great support from the scrum master but I feel like I need to learn a new language, SQL. Can anyone recommend me some reading materials? A: If you need to learn new language, Spring is a good choice. You can take a look on some related Spring tutorials. But if you already know SQL, especially using Entity framework, you don't need to learn Spring. You just need to grasp the entity modeling concepts which are provided by EF. The 2016 Blast The latest POLITICO scoops and coverage of the 2016 elections. Email Sign Up Tweets from Clinton holds large lead in Texas, other Super Tuesday states Hillary Clinton leads in Texas by a wide margin and in other Super Tuesday states as well, according to a new NBC News/Marist poll. The former secretary of state leads Donald Trump 45 percent to 32 percent in the Lone Star State. Bernie Sanders is in third with 14 percent, followed by the Green Party's Jill Stein with 10 percent. Gary Johnson is at 4 percent. The head-to-head matchup is virtually unchanged from the poll taken in September, which had Clinton with 44 percent support to Trump's 33 percent. On the other side, Hillary has a 67 percent to 27 percent favorability rating, while Trump has a 58 percent to 39 percent unfavorable rating. Clinton leads in California by 51 percent to 39 percent, and is ahead by 49 percent to 32 percent in New Jersey. In the three Super Tuesday states that are voting that day — Texas, Oklahoma and Virginia — Clinton leads 52 percent to 32 percent in Texas, 47 percent to 38 percent in Oklahoma and 46 percent to 38 percent in Virginia. The results are very similar to those taken in each of these states on January 26, the most recent time they were polled. In California and New Jersey
